

To Whom It May Concern:

I have heard that the FCC's new broadcast service, Low Power FM, may be expanded to take priority over FM translator service and possibly to force many FM translator radio stations off the air. As a listener of FM translator radio, I would like to make my objection to this plan heard.

While my husband and I listen to a variety of radio programs, including music and news broadcasts, one of our favorite radio stations is K-LOVE, which is heard by hundreds of thousands of people on FM translators throughout the United States. In our area, we hear K-LOVE on 107.1, 100.9, and 92.9. We wake up to it in the morning with our alarm clock, we play it in our vehicles when we drive, and we play it constantly in our home. We are especially happy to know that even when we travel across the country, we can find a local K-Love station almost everywhere we go.

I am hoping that K-LOVE stations will not be forced off the air due to the new FCC plan. Not only does K-LOVE provide positive, encouraging music and news stories to its listeners 24 hours per day, 7 days per week, but it also provides other services, such as full-time pastors on staff who are available to speak with callers at all hours of the day. K-LOVE's ministry has changed lives with its devotion to serving the community for Jesus. Its programming is family-friendly and supports wholesome values that are so needed in today's world. If K-LOVE is forced off the air, communities all across the United States will be deprived of an alternative to the negative content of so much of today's music and news and talk programs. I would certainly not want to see K-LOVE replaced by other programming.

Please do not allow Low Power FM to force FM translator stations off the air.

Sincerely,

Karen Cunningham
